Please describe your ability to be impartial.

I believe my service on a number of local and regional nonprofit boards and AISD committees has enabled me to understand the challenges of balancing both complimentary and competing interests in the community. Nonprofit service on boards and school district committees is a public trust; those invited or chosen to serve on boards and committees have an obligation to listen to and engage with community stakeholders of all perspectives, and while doing so to remain focused on the greater needs of the organization and the community. In addition to currently serving on the boards for the Manor Education Foundation and Forklift Danceworks, I've previously served as a board member for the Austin Museum of Digital Art, the Greater Austin Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Education Foundation. I've also served as a program review panelist for the National Science Foundation, as well as a program review committee member for Leander ISD's CTE programs and Texas State University-San Marcos' School of Engineering External Review Panel. I strive to bring a kind of thoughtful, reflective impartiality to my volunteer work, and if selected for the Independent Citizens Redistricting Commission, would leverage my training in leadership and community stewardship through Leadership Austin (Essential Class 2006) and Austin Area Research Organization McBee Fellow in Civic Entrepreneurship to the goals of the commission.

Please describe your appreciation for the City of Austin's diverse demographics and geography.

Through my service on the AISD Facilities Use and Boundaries Task Force (FUBTF), Facilities Master Plan Task Force, and currently the Boundaries Advisory Committee, I have experience in analyzing, evaluating, and interpreting complex and at-times incongruous bodies of data, and applying that to the human process of listening to and dialoging with parents, community organizations, and regional stakeholders. Through these unique--and challenging--volunteer assignments appointed either by AISD Trustees or the Superintendent, I've come face to face with the wide range of socio-economic faces of the community, and learned a great deal about the vibrant character of Austin's amazing and diverse neighborhoods. I've been humbled by the passion of individuals interested in helping their friends, neighbors, children, and their broader community to find effective and meaningful ways to support increased prosperity, safety and cultural enrichment. If selected for this commission, I hope to bring my experience and knowledge of the neighborhoods and geography I learned through my service to AISD on boundaries issues in a way that might bring the members of the ten new districts the opportunity to be more connected to, and engaged with, the city's governance.

Please provide any other information you wish to be considered during the selection of the most qualified applicants for the Commission.

My wife is a disabled individual, having endured an arteriovenous malformation (AVM) rupture nearly 13 years ago. Although we have been married for just a little over three years, the process of understanding how individuals with chronic or permanent physical and mental disabilities live in our community has been very eye-opening. Through coming to understand the limitations the disabled community faces in their daily lives, be it transit options or gaining access to therapeutic or rehabilitative services offered by city, state and federal agencies, I feel like I might be able to add a unique perspective to the issues of new voting districts and how these communities will may work to identify opportunities to enable stronger participation in our city's governance. Of course I'm not able to speak first-hand like committee members who might be disabled themselves, I would relish the chance to work with them to help share their perspectives within the commission, and where appropriate, lend support to the commission when thinking about these members of our community.
